

The do everything vacation Blog:

Let me get this straight. My family and I will be going on this trip. Will others go with us? I certainly hope so. On my last vacation, the wife and I were happy together but we missed our friends. The foundation of this trip is not that we will go. It's in the friends. Let's do this together. It would be way more fun with a bunch of us. The foundation was laid with the ladies doing a fantastic job with our high school reunion. We are not here without them. Yet, we are building on their effort.

A group of us have attended cruise functions. Some of us have experienced a cruise. Some people have already been to these places like Greece. Maybe it's about the journey and not where we have been. A group of high school friends almost 40 years later going on a trip? It seems impossible. Yet, here we are. Many of us have traveled. I know some that have not gone many places. This is your chance to travel in a group of friends to places we have never seen.

The foundation is laid. The information on what boat, cruise line, and itinerary is done. Does that mean we have decided when, where, and how? No, but the foundation is there. I am slightly erratic on social media. It's me. Does it mean I am hard to live with? Ask my wife. Don't ask my Ex. Yet, out of the box erratic behavior will bring an interesting perspective on a vacation. It will be far more than a vacation.

The types of people that have shared interest are quite different. Yet, this group share one common bond. They don't want a stuffy cruise. They are not into being proper. We never have. We are kids in 50ish year old bodies. We have fun. That type of understanding has laid a foundation for the type of cruise.

A foundation is a dream. The ultimate trip for me would begin in London. We would travel to Paris. From there we would take a river cruise to Barcelona. From that point on we would take the sea cruise through Spain, Italy, Greece, and possibly Croatia or Turkey. Then we would finish in Venice. Will it happen that way? Most certainly it will not. Yet, it's a foundation of thinking too big. Dreaming large. Why undersell it?

The foundation is a price in the 6000-dollar range per person. Don't let that scare you. We have time to save still. 6000 is high but who knows in 2021. However, we are the do everything trip. Does that mean you have to do everything? Certainly not, but you can if you want. I have been to a Sandals resort. It was amazing. I have cruised once. That was astounding. The best choice to me is a combo. The foundation is built. We will put down about 250 dollars refundable within 12 months. Believe that. We are building towards some sweet deals. This will happen.
