

The do everything vacation Blog:

2.0: reinventing the wheel

Never surrender and never fear. The lie is that we have a new normal. Yet, is normal not dreaming about distant lands and distant adventures? For thousands of years people dreamed of what is around the corner. We live in North America because someone dreamed of a distant land. I would even say that a ship carried people to those lands. When they stepped off that boat they knew it! This land and dream were better in person. The C.E.O of a cruise line began as a dreamer. What if we could take thousands of people to their dreams?

So, here I stand in 2020 still dreaming. 2021 is just weeks away. Here is the interesting part. I should have been in Australia last December, yet Cancer bombed that trip. We tried to go in April but that got bombed with Covid. Here we stand in December 2020 and Italy 2021 is bombed. Why? It's because the distance between now and then is not Covid friendly. Will borders open? Will a vaccine work? Will ships be cruising? Unfortunately, the "if's" out number my passion to dream and travel.

I kind of hope I will travel in 2021 but I bet we don't. It's not about Covid. I don't fear stuff like that. However, I am enough of a realist to see 2022 as a better option. A friend of mine says he likes to create vacations as a hobby. The other day I started scouting Victoria falls in Africa. I am ready for Australia and Italy. An interesting trip through Scotland and Ireland is in the works. I'm going to continue to dream of far off lands. Just itching to cruise again. So, we push the Italy date ahead one year. Is it enough? Time will tell.

I will now continue to study and create more trips. Just continue to save money so that when we're free once again, we're outta here! Don't live your life fearing the next thing. More virus will happen. Wars will be fought and economies will struggle. They don't own you! Who owns your dreams and adventures in far off lands? You do! I'm being held back for a time. Yet, when the reigns come off look out! Bring on 2022!