Building the Trip: The final worry

It's a trip so why worry? Covid is a thing of the past mostly. It's my lot in life. There are only three ports in the whole world that require a covid test and I'm going to one of them. Amazingly I'm leaving another of those three two. Clearly Canada and Greece are best friends. They both love debt too! Yes, I do worry about a positive test result in Greece. It would mess things up bigtime. The virus? I don't care about that. But I do care that the Greece and Canadian governments care. Yet, it is what it is. Why worry about something I can't control like fate!

Here we are less than 16 days to go. Everything I needed bought, I did buy. Tickets for several things are purchased. On that note, buy your Eurostar train tickets well in advance. They are massively cheap if you do. I waffled for a week and the price doubled. Live and learn a lot! I decided to buy certain tickets just to be sure we get in. It was probably not necessary but I couldn't find a straight answer.

I am pumped that we will sit on the Eye in London. Stoked that we will be touring Sicily more than I thought. We are even doing a ghost/jack the Ripper tour at night. I said at the beginning that we would probably not do that much excursions on this trip. 800 dollars later lol!

I am looking forward to running three times in Athens. I will run twice in London and once in Paris. Plus, I will run in Kotor too. This trip will rock. All this does not even include the cruise on Regal Princess. I bet that will be epic. The trains, planes, buses, and boats are all timed. The flight to Athens is a little long. Yet, the flight home is rather short comparatively. I think I have all the booked stuff set a part with breathing room. There will be a few rest days.

How many pounds will I gain on the boat? With all my running we shall see. I have planned the tips and spending down to a penny. Just kidding but I do have it mildly planned out. Just putting the final touches on money to bring and some cab connections. Who is driving and picking us up from the airport? Will customs be hard anywhere. I'm more freaked about the Spain/France customs for no reason. It's just I'm not Spanish or French. It's time to finalize a few details. I only have 16 days to get it all together. The cool part is most things are on my phone as long as I don't lose it or not charge it. Worry?
