Past Covid: Will we get there?

It's funny because I realized I missed a blog last month for the first time in five years. I bet it's because I have forgotten about travel. Canada seems to be an endless fear base. No travel, fun, breathing, and future. Will we ever be able to travel again? Covid is what it is. What I thought would die down seems to like it here. The places I want to travel to are in mildly better shape. I want to cruise so bad but were stuck. If restrictions on travel ever lift, we will lift off!

Honestly, the only reason I am blogging right now is that I realized I forgot. Yep, I forgot what it's like to travel. Three years since Jamacia. Wow! We have been through over two years of cancer. She is finished but is travel? I still want to go to Australia. Italy is still on the docket. This pansy ass world can't get past this little virus. I'm not so sure they can. The fear over nothing is so big. I have been looking at South America. Plus, my running on the treadmill in Portugal has been amazing. I want to go there!!

We got the last of our Italy trip airfare back. It's good and sad all at the same time. They say to travel Canada in the meantime. Yeah, sure I want Ontario over Hawaii. Plus, Covid is not going well here. I don't want the vaccine. This world has gone nuts. Will I have to take it to travel? I bet we will. The wife is a hard no! It is going to make living in this world interesting. Will it involve travel? We shall see. Stay tuned!!
